R

GREGORY B. DOSMANN – ALUMNI OF THE YEAR AWARD RECIPIENT

Greg Dosmann joined Edward Jones in 1987, and within 10 years he attended the Managing Partners' Conference, an honor reserved for the top 350 of the firm's more than 13,000 financial advisors. In 1997, Dosmann was named a principal and moved to the firm's headquarters to serve as the area leader for the western United States and British Columbia. In January 2004, he assumed responsibility for marketing individual retirement plans and education savings plans in the retirement plan marketing department. Dosmann joined the field support team in 2014 and now serves as a principal in branch training's field support department. Dosmann was elected in 2013 to the Grace Board of Trustees and serves on the Financial Affairs and Compliance Commission.

"We are extremely proud of Greg's recognition and are not surprised, given his long and illustrious career with Edward Jones. He was extremely successful serving the needs of our clients in New Baltimore and Alma, Mich., for 10 years, and he's been a valued member of our headquarter's management team since 1997. Over his 27-year career at Edward Jones, Greg has certainly embodied all that he learned while a student at Grace, representing the institution with professionalism, enthusiasm and dedication."

- Jim Weddle, Managing Partner, Edward Jones

STEPHEN M. COPELAND – YOUNG ALUMNI OF THE YEAR AWARD RECIPIENT

Stephen Copeland is a writer for The Core Media Group, a book publishing company based in Charlotte, N.C., and a staff writer and columnist at Sports Spectrum Magazine, a national faith-based sports publication. Copeland co-authored "The Jersey Effect" with former Indianapolis Colts punter Hunter Smith and "Finally Free" with New York Jets quarterback Michael Vick. Copeland and The Core Media Group are expecting two more books to come out in the next six months, including a parenting book he co-authored with Steve and Lorri Zeller, parents of Indiana basketball stars Luke Zeller, Tyler Zeller and Cody Zeller. Copeland worked in Grace's Sports Information Office during the four years he attended Grace and received several awards for his athletic stories through CoSIDA (College Sports Information Directors of America).

"We are honored to have Stephen Copeland as the author for our book on parenting. He is an articulate, polite, informed and motivated young man. More importantly than his career skills is the fact that Stephen is a great person. He has firm spiritual roots and has a genuine care for others. We strongly believe that the Lord has put Stephen in our path, and we count this as one of our many blessings. We consider Stephen a member of our family. He has made our life better!"

- Steve & Lorri Zeller and family, parents of basketball stars Tyler, Luke and Cody Zeller

JANINE L. ZELTWANGER – ALUMNI DISTINGUISHED SERVICE AWARD RECIPIENT

Janine Zeltwanger is a senior financial advisor and principal in Ronald Blue & Co.'s Indianapolis office, where she advises clients on financial, estate and tax planning, manages their investments and develops philanthropic strategies. Zeltwanger recently completed 15 years of service on the Grace Board of Trustees, where she served on the Executive Committee and the Student Affairs Commission. As a former Grace athlete, Zeltwanger attends as many Grace athletic events as her schedule will allow and finds ways to invest in and support current student-athletes. At the beginning of the women's volleyball and basketball seasons, Zeltwanger asks the players to fill out 3x5 cards with prayer requests, and she prays through the cards during the year. Zeltwanger also comes to Winona Lake for the week of Welcome Weekend to assist the Student Affairs office as it gets ready to receive the incoming freshman class.

"Janine's years of service to the Board of Trustees, and specifically, to the Student Affairs Commission have been invaluable to me as an administrator. Her commitment to Grace is evident, and yet, it is the ways in which she loves and cares for employees and students that have made the biggest impact. Our team has benefited immensely from her generosity."

- Dr. Jim Swanson, Vice President for Academic and Student Services, Grace College & Seminary

President Bill Katip gives an address at this year's Homecoming Banquet.

FROM THE PRESIDENT Dr. Bill Katip

Dear Grace alumni, parents, friends and supporters,

Wow! What a "bountiful" first year I've experienced as president of Grace. God's blessings can be seen everywhere.

For example, did you know that this fall 475 new freshmen and transfers started at Grace, the largest incoming class to date? We've now reached an all-time enrollment high of nearly 2,200!

Even though this has been a year of pretty substantial changes, God's provision has brought in sufficient revenues and gift income, enabling us to finish the last fiscal year in the black with a small surplus. We're so grateful for your generous outpouring of financial support.

Our recent tuition reduction announcement, "A Measure of Grace," has been received with growing enthusiasm. We're delivering on our commitment to find and implement strategies that will make college more affordable for families and students while holding fast to a faith-based, excellent education.

We've been blessed by a wealth of new physical improvements as well. Our soccer field now has lights, new dugouts, new bleachers and new turf. We've built the marvelous 80-person Lancer Lofts townhouse residence hall at the corner of King's Highway and Seventh Street. Our science students have new microscopes and other new equipment, including some amazing new 3-D printers. The remodeled west end of the Gordon Recreation Center now houses beautiful new offices for our health and counseling services, campus safety and sport management programs. God has also bountifully blessed us with good staff and faculty. Three new senior administrators (Dr. John Lillis, Paul Blair and Drew Flamm) have joined our executive leadership team, and we've welcomed some wonderful new teaching faculty and support staff.

But the blessings aren't only physical. Fifty students now attend a voluntary weekly prayer meeting, which has sprung up on campus. Our chapel services are spiritually rich and as encouraging as ever. Our athletic teams are doing well. There's optimism, there's fresh enthusiasm, and there's a strong sense of purpose everywhere you go on campus.

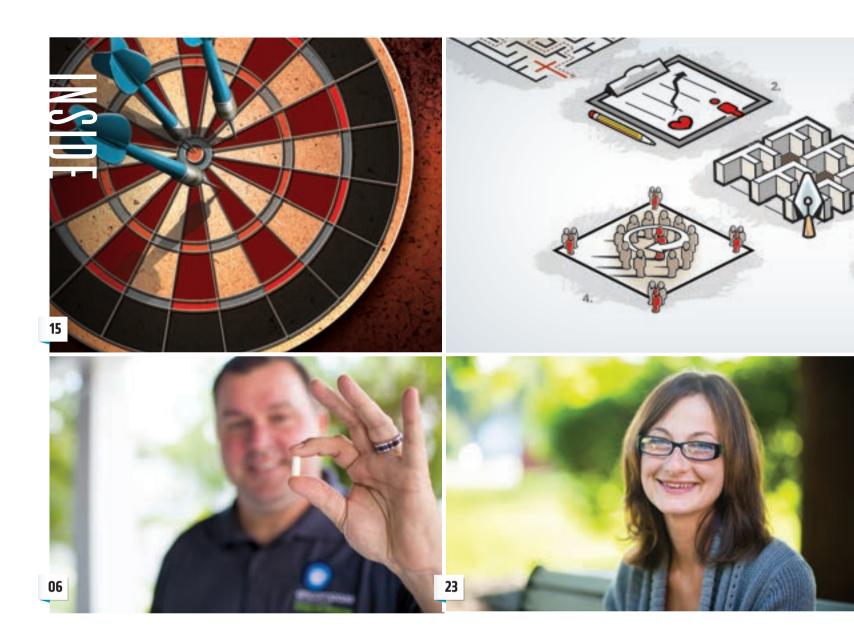

We don't deserve any of these blessings. It's all by God's grace. Along with the choirmaster David, we claim Psalm 13:6 as our praise: "I will sing to the Lord, because he has dealt bountifully with me."

Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!

BOUNTIFUL

Bountiful is our theme for the fall issue of 2|8|9, but it might as well be the theme for this whole season of favor at Grace College & Seminary.

It's a fitting word to describe this eventful year of blessing. But it's in the word's Anglo-French roots that we find the real gem in this word. You see, "bountiful" means "a bonus good."

Let's think about the story of Elizabeth, one of the first people on the scene of the New Testament.

The mother of John the Baptist was a woman of stature and means. Elizabeth lacked nothing. She was, after all, the wife of Zechariah, a temple priest. Despite the family's prominence and pay grade, Elizabeth suffered the severe poverty of barrenness. Even in her old age she wanted children. Though barren and grieved, she was never bitter toward God. She kept her focus on Him and recognized His hand of blessing in her life.

In characteristic fashion, God supplanted her barrenness with a blessing — a child in the 11th hour of her life; a child who would prepare the way for the coming Messiah. Knowing this, isn't it fitting that Elizabeth's name means "My God is bountiful"? Her blessing was in her full womb. But her bonus good was her worship of the Giver. Imagine discovering a small, unexpected and anonymous gift perfectly wrapped with your name clearly on it — just waiting for you when you get home. You'll agree, gifts are almost always good. But it isn't enough to just receive something, because there is so much added value in knowing who sent it. The bonus good is when you eventually discover the giver and the accompanying flood of relational associations.

Somewhere beyond abundance, beyond acquiring and stockpiling, the idea of "bountiful" implies an extra measure of goodness at work inherent to the giver. Bountiful implies a giver who has given richly.

Following God's lead, I like to "lavish" on my wife and my kids on occasion. (I like "lavish" so much better than "spoil.") And when I do, sometimes they respond as if I've gone overboard. I remind them that extravagance is never wasted on extraordinary love — if only to occasionally demonstrate the way God "so loved us."

Won't you join me throughout this issue and even through the entire autumn season giving praise to God for His gifts? Actually, Thanksgiving needs to be a 365day holiday. Our God is truly that bountiful.

REMEMBERING FRIENDS: GAMMA TOWNHOUSE GETS A NEW NAME

Generosity helps make Grace what it is. Over the years, countless people have come alongside the school, supporting it in friendship with their time, service and financial support.

But this year, two people in particular have risen to the top of the list of friends Grace is thankful to and for: Karl and Evelyn Kauffman.

Evelyn was a close friend of former Grace President Dr. Ron Manahan (MDiv 70, ThM 77, ThD 82) and his wife Barbara (C 86). They used to visit her in Berne, Ind., the town where Kauffman and her husband attended the Bethel Brethren Church (FGBC). Her death last year marked the parting of a great friend and an avid supporter of the college and seminary.

Though Mr. Kauffman passed away in the 1980s, Dr. Manahan remembers Evelyn fondly. "Every time my wife and I were in her home she welcomed us warmly," he says. "She always wanted to know how we were doing and was interested in our lives. She cared about others and prayed for them."

But those visits became more meaningful to Grace than anyone could have ever imagined.

Her appreciation for the Manahans' kindness and her love for Grace prompted Evelyn Kauffman to name the school as a recipient of her estate. Additionally, it was settled that, when the Kauffman estate gift was made, the then recently rebuilt Gamma Nu townhouse would be named after the couple.

Evelyn passed away last November, and earlier this year, Grace College & Seminary received a $2 million dollar estate gift from the Kauffmans. The money is being used to help Grace do what it does best: offer a world-class, biblically based higher education at unbelievably competitive rates.

Grace desires to remember the Kauffmans just as much as they remembered Grace in their final arrangements. The school has therefore officially renamed the former Gamma Nu Townhouse according to Mrs. Kauffman's wishes. The Karl and Evelyn Kauffman Hall has been dedicated with a sign honoring the couple's friendship with Grace; it now stands proudly outside the residence hall.

Dr. Manahan sees the renaming as an appropriate and meaningful act of appreciation and thankfulness. "Naming the building after Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman is a noble way of reminding all of us — and generations to come — to honor and thank God for donors like the Kauffmans," says Dr. Manahan. "Evelyn was a good friend, and she will be missed, but never forgotten."

IT HAS BECOME AN ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE TO A PLACE THAT REPRESENTS ONE OF HIS GREATEST JOYS AND AT THE SAME TIME, SOME OF THE MOST BREATHTAKING AND HEARTBREAKING SCENES HE'LL NEVER FORGET.

Dr. Terrance Waggoner (C 82) heads back to Ethiopia at least once every year since he and his wife adopted their daughter five years ago. Despite the desperate and stark condition of the environments he encounters, he tries to bring one of his kids with him as often as he can. He wants them to experience the culture firsthand, to let it impact their worldview and concept of compassion forever.

The picture he paints is haunting. "We went to this governmentrun orphanage," recalls Dr. Waggoner. "In this one room of 50 babies, you could only hear one baby crying. All of the 49 other babies just lay there silently. So Logan, my 20-year-old son, asked the caretakers, 'Why is there only one baby crying?' And they said, 'Well, that baby's just been here for a day. All the other ones have no one to hold or care for them. They're all cried out."

At this point, Dr. Waggoner pauses to contain his emotions, takes a breath and struggles to continue. "I can't sleep at night sometimes," he says through tears. "It's hard."

Needless to say, adoption has changed the Waggoner's lives. Their daughter, five-year-old Anna Tihun — her Ethiopian name — Waggoner, has compelled her father to show as much love as humanly possible to unloved children all around the world.

Most people would recognize Dr. Waggoner for his successful chiropractic practice in northern Indiana. But themes of adoption, innovative provision and creative entrepreneurship are even stronger undercurrents in his life, forces that have given birth to a simple but revolutionary idea.

Encompass Nutrients started one morning when Dr. Waggoner burst into his nephew Aaron Waggoner's (BS 00) office with an idea. As a chiropractor, Dr. Waggoner sells multiple nutrient supplements to his patients. But one day an inquisitive customer forced him to entirely rethink what he was selling. "Why do I have to take seven expensive supplements?" a frustrated patient wanted to know. "Why can't there be just one?" Never one to balk at possibility, Dr. Waggoner considered this question at face value and found the nutrient sales model used by his practice needing reinvention. In quick succession, this valid customer frustration turned into an exciting business opportunity. Dr. Waggoner wanted to invent, market and sell an all-in-one nutrient and then give the money to organizations that help orphanages and child-rescue initiatives worldwide. It was a way to integrate his practice, his knowledge of health supplements and his passion for orphans. It would also be the only business of its kind in the world.

Fast-acting opportunist that Dr. Waggoner is, a few days later, the company had a name, a tax ID and a solid launchpad. As of early September, seven months after the product hit store shelves, Encompass Nutrients had over six-figures in sales, sky-high hopes and limitless growth potential. They give 80 percent of their profit to organizations caring for orphaned and vulnerable children, and Dr. Waggoner is not afraid to invest his own funds in what he believes will not just change lives, but save them.

Dr. Terrance Waggoner (left) is the founder of Encompass Nutrients, and his nephew Aaron Waggoner (right) serves as the company's vice president.

The future of Encompass is now as bright as its vision. Aaron Waggoner is in close contact with at least 20 locations across the country that are eager to have this unique supplement on their shelves. "I think that Encompass is going to grow exponentially," he says. And with plans to implement a system that will give online promoters a sales commission, Waggoner hopes that the word about Encompass will spread quickly and effectively.

"Dr. Waggoner came in and told me, 'My goal is to make five dollars a bottle and sell two million bottles a month," Aaron Waggoner, vice president of Encompass Nutrients, said with a chuckle. "He shoots for the stars, and often hits them! I've never met anybody who works as hard as he does."

This Indiana chiropractor's passion for orphans goes all the way back to his childhood. Dr. Waggoner grew up attending the Grace Brethren Chapel in Fremont, Ohio, with five biological siblings. Each child attended Grace College at least one year. After his older brothers left for college, the Waggoner family hosted at least 16 kids at different times, one of whom his parents adopted when she was 21. "I grew up with a heartbeat for fostering kids," says Dr. Waggoner whose parents began what is now a multi-generational trend.

The family adoption bug has been contagious. Dr. Waggoner's adopted sister Robin Crosby (Waggoner) Miller and her husband adopted from China, and now Aaron Waggoner and his wife are also securing full adoption rights for their son, Ty, a two-year-old from Thailand. The couple is already in the process of providing Ty a sister from Thailand as well. Aaron points to his uncle as being a source of inspiration and information during the difficult process of overseas adoption. "A lot of people are scared to go down that road because there are so many unknowns, but it definitely helps when you know people who have been through it," Aaron said.

Not only has Dr. Waggoner been through the adoption process, he's co-founded Village to Village International, an organization helping families find the information and the funds they need to adopt children from all over the world. Visit their website (www.villagetovillageintl.com) and you'll see the real and remarkable results of this initiative: 22 profiles of families well on the way to meeting their financial goals and bringing home their adopted sons and daughters.

"WE'RE NOT HERE FOR OURSELVES," DR. WAGGONER SAID WITH IMMENSE EARNEST IN HIS VOICE. "I THINK THAT EVERY CHILD ON EARTH SHOULD HAVE AN EARTHLY FATHER AND MOTHER AND A CHANCE TO KNOW THEIR HEAVENLY FATHER. I WILL ALWAYS TRY TO USE MY SUCCESS WITH BUILDING BUSINESS ... TO GIVE HOPE."

As he was speaking, the door opened and in ran Anna Tihun. Dr. Waggoner laughed as she ran up to him and he said he's reminded of a story. "The other day, Anna's school bus driver mentioned that he'd been driving a bus for 25 years, but had never seen anything like what happens to Anna at school. All the kids heading off to their cars line up to give Anna a big hug! She loves others, and people love her." Anna giggled with glee in the background as her father sang her praises.

Even though Dr. Waggoner is a man who has invested his life in so many successful endeavors, changed so many lives, fostered so many amazing stories — it seems to be this intimate "off-camera" moment with his precious daughter that characterizes the man and his mission.

Few lives can claim a more vivid portrait of fatherhood, unconditional love and what the word "home" truly means. 🖈

Over the past couple years, Grace College has been hard at work making college more affordable.

Unchanging MISSION Game-changing METHODS

Our latest endeavor to make a Christian education possible for more families begins with a significant reduction on the price tag of a Grace degree. For the 2015-16 academic year, Grace is reducing its tuition by nine percent. Furthermore, for every year the student returns, Grace is decreasing his/her tuition by an additional $500. Students will never pay more in tuition than they paid for their first year. While most colleges raise their tuition by three percent each year, our students' tuition bill will decrease each year they return. On top of that, we're picking up the tab on one of the most frustrating side expenses in college: books. Every textbook rental for every class is absolutely free. It's all a part of an initiative we're calling "A Measure of Grace."

"We believe so strongly in the value of quality, biblically based education. It's become nearly impossible for many families to afford a faith-based education, and we're committed to doing everything we can to put it within the reach of every student," said President Bill Katip (BA 74). "What we're not doing is eliminating programs or cutting back services: we're still committed as ever to recruiting faculty and staff who are masters in their fields. Rather, we're creating operating efficiencies and leveraging the expertise of others through partnerships to deliver the most affordable education possible. Families shouldn't have to choose between a quality education and an affordable one. With the Lord's help, Grace is delivering it all."

That's our definition of faith-based higher education: "affordably excellent." So spread the word.

REDUCTION

Most colleges will raise their tuition by an average of 3% each year. We aren't raising our tuition, plus we are reducing our fall 2015 tuition by 9%.

No more tuition

We will not raise students' tuition; rather, for each year of continuous enrollment, we decrease students' tuition by $500.

That's right! You heard us. Every textbook rental for every class is absolutely free! That's an estimated savings of $1,200 per year. And we will deliver them to students' rooms! (consumables and workbooks not included)

grace's new BIG MAN

Standing at 6 feet 6 inches, with enormous hands, quick feet and the ability to literally "crash the boards" and "own the paint," Grace's new mascot "Sir Red" was unveiled to the student body in a spirited August assembly. The general public, in an online poll, submitted names for Grace's new mascot before a list of finalists was chosen. Students, faculty, professors, alumni, fans and community members then voted on the finalists until President Bill Katip (BA 74) finally unveiled the winning name.

Our allegiance to the color red, which our mascot now commemorates, has historical significance for the Lancers. Grace's athletic teams were first represented by the Seminary, dubbing themselves as the Ambassadors with the colors blue and gold. When the college decided to establish its own athletic identity, it chose the color red, and Lancer Nation was born.

There is no chink in Sir Red's state-of-the-art armor. He readies for battle by donning a full-bodied, breathable, flexible and moveable mesh set of armor. He charges with a detachable lance and a shield to both protect Grace's home court and shish kabob any opposition. To see Sir Red in action, visit www.GCLancers.com for a schedule of upcoming games.

FROM FIREFLIES TO FRIDAY NIGHT LIGHTS

From a distance, the sky above Winona Lake danced with light. Thousands of new watts surged through the Kosciusko County electrical grid displacing the resident fireflies. An estimated 1,200 fans packed the newly renovated Miller Athletic Complex on Aug. 15 to take in a historic night for Grace Athletics. The men's and women's soccer teams enjoyed their first taste of soccer under the lights at Miller Field in a pair of night-time exhibition matches. Along with the stadium lights, the complex debuted new bleacher seating that quadrupled the capacity, a new scoreboard, team dugouts, an enclosed press box, a media crow's nest and an entryway for a standing-room-only crowd.

A pregame ceremony led by Grace Athletic Director Chad Briscoe officially opened the new stadium. Grace soccer coaches Matt Hotchkin (S 11) and Michael Voss along with their families and Grace board member Kip Cone (BA 90, MDiv 96) turned on the lights for the first time to the sound of thunderous applause.

The men's game saw the Lancers pull out a 2-0 exhibition victory over club team F.C. Indiana. Austin Altimus was credited with a goal and an assist in the second half to propel the Lancers to an opening win. The women's match featured the Lady Lancers against Haiti's Women's National Team, currently No. 56 in the FIFA/Coca-Cola Women's World Rankings. Haiti produced two quick goals to start the match. Grace responded patiently to build its possession-based attack, but lost with a final score of 4-1. In addition to the estimated 1,200 fans in attendance on Friday night, more than 650 viewers joined the crowd via Grace's live stream video broadcast, which was featured on www.GCLancers.com/watch.

GRACE ATHLETIC WEBSITE WINS THREE NATIONAL AWARDS

Grace's athletic website www.GCLancers.com, newly redesigned in June 2013, earned three national top-10 awards at the NAIA-SIDA National Convention this summer. Grace's site tied for 10th place in the "Outsourced Websites" contest and was tops among the Crossroads League members. The Lancers' website was designed by SIDEARM Sports and is maintained by Sports Information Director Josh Neuhart (BS 11). Additionally, GCLancers.com earned two top-10 results in the "Best Special Event Webpage" contest. The webpage celebrating the men's basketball team's 1,000 career victories was fourth at the national level, and the NCCAA Basketball Championship Central was eighth overall.

GRACE COLLEGE CAMPUSWIRE

The "Pristine" (left) and the "Bella Luna," by photographer Peter Lik, are two among nine donated pieces of artwork that now beautify Grace's campus.

GRACE RECEIVES ART DONATION

Nine pieces of artwork by multi-award-winning photographer Peter Lik were donated by a Grace alumni couple this summer. These highly appreciated art pieces, retailing for more than $200,000, now adorn hallways and offices in the Cooley Science Center and McClain Hall. Lik specializes in landscape photography and is the recipient of the Master Photographer award from both the Australian Institute of Professional Photography (AIPP) and the Professional Photographers of America (PPA).

"Donating the artwork was the perfect way for us to support the college. We wanted to say 'thank you' for the biblical training Grace gave us that has profoundly influenced our lives," the donors stated. A gift of this fashion also allowed them to maximize tax savings, creating a win-win for everyone. "It's making more and more sense for donors to gift appreciated assets like art, real estate or stocks because not only does it greatly benefit the college, but it also benefits the giver," explains Vice President of Advancement Drew Flamm. "This art enhances the look of our campus, and if we ever decide to sell, the proceeds will benefit our students."

"It's a joy to have such beautiful art given to Grace," says Kim Reiff, chair of the Art Department. "Grace and the Art Department are grateful for this gift."

HOLDING APPRECIATED ASSETS? CONCERNED ABOUT CAPITAL GAINS TAXES?

If you are considering a gift to Grace College & Seminary, and you own appreciated artwork, stock or land, you might want to consider donating the appreciated asset (or part of it) to Grace. A donor will not have to pay capital gains taxes on an asset donated to Grace.

If you are also hoping for some additional income, an appreciated asset could fund a gift annuity. This is the ultimate win-win-win. You will (1) help Grace, (2) receive additional income and (3) reduce capital gains taxes and spread the reduced capital gains taxes over the lifetime of the donor.

GRACE TO ADD WOMEN'S GOLF AS SPORT

Grace College announced it would be adding women's golf to its athletic program in the fall of 2015. The Lancers, under Athletic Director Chad Briscoe, will offer 15 varsity intercollegiate sports with the inclusion of women's golf. Denny Duncan (BS 80) will serve as the team's first head coach. Duncan has worked in education as an administrator or teacher for 34 years, including over 20 years in adjunct work for Grace. His daughter Elena was a four-year letter winner and NAIA National Qualifier for Malone University's women's golf team.

"I'm thrilled to have this opportunity to work with studentathletes who love competition and want to live in a way that honors Jesus Christ," Duncan said. "I see the game of golf as a lifelong pursuit that mirrors our walk with Christ. I also know the industry of golf has many opportunities for young women."

Women's golf will begin full-fledged competition in the Crossroads League in its first season next fall. The Crossroads League is slated to feature all 10 institutions participating in 2015 for the first time. The winner of the league tournament is eligible to compete at NAIA Nationals each season.

3-D LAB IS OPERATIONAL AT GRACE

This past summer, Grace purchased five 3-D printers and established a 3-D lab in the Morgan Library. The process of 3-D printing, or additive printing, applies successive layers of material in different shapes to make a three-dimensional solid object from a digital model. A task force of professors from across fields worked together to integrate the technology with several of Grace's majors, and this fall, dozens of students are leveraging the 3-D lab for their projects. Vice President of Academic Affairs Dr. John Lillis says his goal is for every student who comes through Grace, regardless of his or her major, to have experience with 3-D printing. "It's one more tool in a student's toolbox," said Lillis, "and it's is a fulfillment of our mission to develop competent, career-ready students."

RECAPTURING DREAMS AS AN ADULT LEARNER

FROM OBSTACLES TO OPTIONS

BY ANDREW JONES (BA 11)

OPPORTUNITIES FAVOR DETERMINED PEOPLE WHO AREN'T AFRAID TO DREAM, SACRIFICE AND PASSIONATELY PURSUE THE REWARDS FOR THEIR HARD WORK. Serena Case (BS 14) knows that better than most. After working 18 years in manufacturing she wanted something more out of life, and college seemed like the best way to find her calling. But between financial conundrums and past experiences with institutions where students weren't the highest priority, Case felt like opportunities she might have seized were further away than ever.

"Things didn't end up working out the way I thought [they would]," she says. She had started her nursing degree at a state school in northern Indiana, but she felt lost in the crowd.

"I didn't feel like the professors really knew me as a person," she says. This added to the fact that Case was afraid she wouldn't be able to maneuver the difficulties of higher education. She points to a lack of educational experience as one of the things that held her confidence at bay. "I always felt like that was a stumbling block to me," she says. And with a family at home, her career options seemed to be narrowing.

Case's situation is not a rare one. More and more, adult learners are coming back to college classrooms seeking to start or finish a degree. But real life anxieties often hold them back. Their fear, family responsibilities, work, money and/or commute sometimes just get in the way of their dreams. As Case found out, it would take a really special community to turn her hopes into realities.

"I ended up calling Grace College to just ask about the Nursing program. I got wait-listed because the program was completely full for that semester. However, Christina Dulworth (the office manager for Graduate and Adult Enrollment) said that I should check out the Grace Opportunities for Adult Learners (GOAL) program while I waited." At first, Case wasn't sure GOAL was for her. She knew it involved business-oriented subject material and felt like she might not have been equal to the task. But after some deliberation, she decided to go for it.

In the wake of that decision, Case's life began to change dramatically.

The first noticeable difference was the faculty at Grace. "Every instructor I've had is more of a friend and mentor," she says, recalling how she learned to trust her professors quickly because they were not only kind, but vulnerable. "In my very first class, Cindy [Sisson] (BA 77) (a part-time GOAL instructor and vice president of enrollment) shared a personal story that really touched my heart; her dad had to go back and revisit a part of his life that had hindered him." That story meant a lot to Case who, in many ways, was revisiting an unfinished story of her own. "It seriously changed my life," she says. "The education at Grace College is top-notch. You get so immersed in the hands-on learning." She recalls being unexpectedly encouraged by a professor who, at the beginning of her studies, told her that she had great public-speaking abilities — something she'd never dreamed she'd hear. Case was also quick to recognize her cohort — the group of adult learners who were pursuing degrees alongside her characterizing them as accepting and encouraging.

Case began to believe in her potential. As she worked hard to master each subject, the formal concept of a career began to look more and more plausible. All of the sudden, obstacles started looking more like opportunities again.

Then it happened.

One day this summer, after she graduated from the GOAL program in May, she received an email from one of her instructors, Allyn Decker (BS 85, MABC 86), a part-time GOAL instructor and director of the Orthopaedic Regulatory and Clinical Affairs (ORCA) and Medical Device Quality Management (MDQM) programs. He had referred her to someone in device quality management, an area of study she's now pursuing as a graduate student. She glanced the email over and thought little of it until that evening when she got home. There, in her inbox, was an email from DePuy Orthopaedics, Inc., — a global leader in orthopaedic devices and supplies — asking her to call for a phone interview.

"I was in shock," Case remembers of the moment when opportunity became a new career. "And I felt 'this is God." Moreover, she had renewed confidence. Before GOAL, Case admits that she might have been apprehensive about accepting such a position; now it was crystal clear.

She started for DePuy as a contract quality engineer tech at DePuy through Kelly Services this September.

"Sometimes students chicken out when they're faced with opportunities like this," says Allyn Decker, the professor who connected Case with her new job. He's proud of Case for taking the initiative that she did in securing her own future. "It's exactly what we hope happens [to all students] as a result of our program," he says.

Decker sees Case as a model for the high degree of potential Grace's adult learning initiative can foster in students.

GRACE COLLE & GRACE THEOLOGI SEM

"[STUDENTS] HAVE TO COME WILLING TO BE TRANSFORMED," SAYS DECKER. "AND BY THAT I MEAN WILLING TO CHALLENGE OLD BELIEFS AND MINDSETS AND EVEN THEIR SELF-CONCEPT. THEY HAVE TO SEE THEMSELVES AS SOMEONE WHO HAS POTENTIAL."

And even though Case's story may not be every GOAL graduate's, the program is made up of people who sincerely believe that, regardless of your situation, you can find and connect with opportunities.

"It doesn't matter what your background is," says Case. "It doesn't even matter if you just have a GED! When you get into GOAL ... they care. I guess that's the biggest difference between Grace and other colleges I've been to. They really do care."

Sometimes simply blending the elements of sincere, first-class care and outstanding instruction can turn any and all barriers into surprisingly achievable goals. *

A STEPPING STONE TO

THE LANCER LOFTS RESIDENCE HALL — completed this August — now houses 79 students in its townhouse-style units. With desk spaces in each bedroom (complete with lighting designed specifically for studying!) and its full kitchen and expansive common area, students will be equipped to study, cook and commune all in the comfort of one building.

Students have already made themselves at home, hosting large gatherings in their new quarters and even holding impromptu concerts in the nearby gazebo. Lancer Loft resident and junior Katie Anderson says she loves the kitchen where she makes two of her favorite foods: sweet potato pancakes and chocolate zucchini muffins. "The shared living room area is also great," she says. "We've already made wonderful memories with my other loft mates and friends who come over." Senior Jamie Todd agrees. "The lofts offer me the privacy I need to study, but also a common area where I can hang out with my roommates. It's been really cool to see how people in the lofts have opened up their space and hosted lots of people; we just had four girls from our Growth Group over earlier this week," she says. And she adds, "What's not to love about having a dishwasher, a laundry area and a plasma TV!"

Both students agree that another one of the great benefits of the Lancer Lofts is how it mimics what it's like to live more independently. "It's like a stepping stone to being on my own. I'm seeing what it's like to cook for myself," observes Todd.

"And since we do not constantly see each other like in a dorm setting," says Anderson, "it has helped me learn more about being intentional with others."

Student Lynnae Miller cooks a meal in the fully equipped kitchen of her Lancer Loft unit.

Spiritual ransformation

In Student Affairs, we try to make it impossible for any student to graduate from Grace College without running headlong into Jesus.

Grace College is unique in that we have positioned our academic core, our spiritual life development, our student leadership and our career services under Student Affairs. While many Christian colleges are tempted to decentralize these offices, we've found that philosophically we can't. Here's why we're so intentional about what we do ...

To "Own" or "Abandon"

Statistics show college is when most students either own or abandon their faith.

Hearts Over Heads

This critical spiritual journey is why we task ourselves with both a head count and a "heart count." We want to know our students, esteem their identity in Christ and understand their faith struggles — to foster environments that deeply impact and transform students spiritually.

Build On A Strong Foundation

Our First-Year Experience gets everyone on the same page. An academic core curriculum uniquely positioned under the Student Affairs office includes required Bible and worldview classes. Growth Groups, a campus-wide commitment to the Student Lifestyle Statement and our campus theme serve as cornerstones.

Leaders Replicating Leaders

Students are mentored by leaders who then become leaders themselves, warmly interacting with incoming freshmen in an environment of life-on-life discipleship.

Jesus Has Many Faces

Every student who graduates from Grace College has a story to tell of a life-changing relationship that helped them see Jesus in a more powerful way.

Chapel Unites Us

Student Affairs still requires chapel attendance three times a week because we believe it reorients us to Jesus and gives perspective to our academic pursuits.

We Are Intentionally Relational

We're purposeful about social activities and residence life that encourage spiritual thought and conversation. We want students to validate truth through the lens of real life interactions, activities and redemptive relationships.

We Serve Together

Cultur

We mobilize students for service everywhere from campus ministry and local community service projects to cross-cultural outreach.

We Don't Edit the Bible

Our unwavering belief is in the Word of God as absolute truth - a "manual for ALL of life."

The X-Factor

The ministry world and the marketplace are hungry for Grace graduates differentiated by substance, confidence and competence. We are intentional about keeping Christ and His Word front and center in our classrooms, dorm rooms and boardrooms. His name is worshipped in our hallways, on our walkways and in our chapel services, His name is made known by our athletes and short-term cross-cultural teams. An intentional devotion to Jesus is the difference.

REACHING OUT

FROM THE DESK OF THE DIRECTOR OF ALUMNI RELATIONS

I am always honored to share with the Grace Alumni Family in 2|8|9. I would like to invite each of you to celebrate with me the amazing things God is doing not only here on campus but also in the lives of our alumni and friends of Grace! You can keep up with alumni news and campus happenings via our Facebook page "Grace Alumni Community" and by visiting our website at www.grace. edu and our alumni page at www.grace.edu/alumni.

Our Homecoming 2014 celebration was amazing! We moved the event up one month this year, and while we still held the traditional alumni basketball game, we added many other sporting events and opportunities for alumni to connect with each other. We honored three alumni (see more about this on the fold-out cover) and had a great time of celebration at the Homecoming Banquet. For those who attended, thank you for making the trip back to Grace. If you were not able to be here, we hope that you can make it back next year. Homecoming 2015 is scheduled for Sept. 25-26.

If you live in town or are ever in Winona Lake for a visit, we'd love to see you. The Alumni Services Suite is located in the Manahan Orthopaedic Capital Center; stop in for a hot drink, visit with our staff and browse through some of our archives, yearbooks and pictures.

As we enter into this season of thanksgiving, may you know God's bountiful grace in new ways.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW? DAVE WILDMAN AND TIM DEVLIN

In the Spring 2014 issue of 2|8|9, we spoke with alumni Dave Wildman (BS 11) and Tim Devlin (BA 07) about their plans to race the Tour Divide in the summer with the goal of raising $25,000 to help build the House of Hope orphanage in the Dominican Republic.

Devlin completed the trip, but Wildman suffered from heat stroke and dehydration early on in the race and eventually had to stop. Wildman and Devlin surpassed their goal, raising $30,000 for the orphanage. They were able to visit the House of Hope in October 2014. Below they share some of their personal reflections on the trip.

From Tim Devlin:

When we were approaching the trip, I expected to hear the audible voice of God in those mountains. I really wanted to have an "Abraham moment" where God specifically spoke to me, but I didn't find him there. Instead, God revealed himself to me in a much bigger way – His way! I found him in the mountains. I saw Him in the vast expanse of "Big Sky" Montana. I saw him in the stillness of the Great Basin. There was one moment when I could not find words to express the presence of God as I stood in His presence. I had been passing through grizzly country in Southern Canada, and I rounded a bend after a long climb. As the tree line cleared, four massive glaciers appeared amongst the rugged Canadian Rockies. There had never been a time in my life that I felt smaller and in the presence of my all-powerful God. I couldn't say anything; I couldn't really move. I was alone, but I knew I was surrounded by Someone much bigger than me.

From Dave Wildman:

God taught me a lot in this journey, but it took me having to be brought to my knees (literally) on the trip. Due to heat stroke and dehydration suffered on day one, I ended up in an ER on day three for fluids and eventually had to drop out of the race. After returning home, I began a process of asking God why He allowed me to go all the way out there and not finish? But God showed me that leading doesn't always mean you will be on the front line. Sometimes God calls us to lead the charge into battle and other times He asks us to lead people to the cause.

As I looked back on the whole process, from the time I asked Tim to join me on this adventure to the point when Larrived home. I started to see how God was leading me, but I missed His calling and inserted my own agenda. God led Tim to do the ride, Mason and Lia Geiger [film and photography crew] to share the story post ride, and He used me to gather the troops together for the cause. Sometimes it's hard to understand God's calling on our lives, and we choose to ignore His clear calling and do things our way. But His design is always best and following Him is easier!

The Geigers are producing a documentary of Wildman and Devlin's trip. To follow their progress, visit www.masongeigerfilm.com.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW? CHRIS VAN ALL SBURG

In the Summer 2011 edition of 2|8|9, we told Chris Van Allsburg's (MDiv 02) story about visiting Korah, an area in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, where he encountered devastating poverty. While there he learned of a child sponsorship ministry, Transformation Love, which helps provide children with school supplies, food and Bible study. He began sponsoring Hiwot, a young girl whose mother had AIDS, and served on Transformation Love's board for a year. Van Allsburg returned to Addis Ababa for a visit in July 2014 to teach a philosophy and theology class at Evangelical Theological Seminary. Although life is still desperate for many, he saw many rays of hope piercing the darkness. Here is one such account.

I met Ma'arig and her three children, along with her nephew Kalid in 2011 when we visited her in her home in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. Ma'arig was living in the basement of a new home in the Korah area. She told us that her husband, a day laborer, only made scant birr (Ethiopian dollars) per day, while she cooked food for other families.

Fast forward to 2014. A couple weeks ago, while walking up the road from the Transformation Love (TL) office in Korah, I was explaining to my Ethiopian companion why I come to Korah all the way from America. Sammy and I were on our way to visit Hiwot for a bit, and I told him, "You know, some people are confused as to why I'm doing what I'm doing here. ..."

Before I could finish my sentence, this woman walked toward us, and it's Ma'arig. We instantly recognized each other. Both our eyes opened wide, and I said, "Hey! I know you! I have your picture, I have your picture!" She was so ecstatic to see me, and I her. She looked at Sammy and started rattling off a novel about how much she loves me for visiting her three years ago. She said without TL. she'd be dead. She says she was very sick and in a very dark place in her life back then, but we came and visited her and gave her food and sponsored her nephew, Kalid.

This is why I go to Korah. There was no need to finish my explanation to Sammy, because along came Ma'arig, and she explained everything.

Winona Lake, IN 46590

[Address Service Requested]

160,000 Smiles

We just finished a fantastic fifth Annual Photoshoot Week.

Every year since 2010, a team of talented photographers, videographers, logistics gurus and art directors — with an arsenal of camera gear and golf carts — scour the campus intent on finding the perfect panoramics and portraits. The mission: telling Grace's compelling story and conveying the indescribable warmth and welcoming community our students know as "Grace College." Likewise, we want the world to know about the beautiful lakeside setting and sunsets we marvel at here in Winona Lake and Warsaw, Ind.

These photoshoots have paid off in a repository of more than 160,000 images that we use in advertising, admissions recruiting, advancement and in publications like 2/8/9. Our back cover is a parting shot from this year's effort.
